NOTICES

Farewell to Nathalie

For the last 12 months, Nathalie Mareš has been scoping the role of Administrative Assistant, in the areas of mission and ministry, as well as dedicated support for our very busy Dean. This work had built up significantly in recent years, and we could no longer absorb it into the roles of existing staff. Nathalie has done a wonderful job, in only 10 hours a week, to find out exactly what is needed for us. Thanks to her, we have been able to re-work some of the office tasks, and compile a job description for a new permanent role (see “Vacancies”). At the same time, she has been a really great member of the office team here, and we are all very sad to see her leave (though we knew this was going to happen, 12 months ago). She will continue her other role with the Church of Scotland, as well as pursuing some new challenges.

Thank you Nathalie!

ALL CHURCHES

"An Indian church congregation is looking for a church in Edinburgh to hold their services. Presently they meet once a month on 2nd Sunday afternoons, for a Holy Communion service led by their priest who covers Scotland. However, due to the reported parking charges from April 2019 on Sundays in Edinburgh, they would like to engage with an Episcopalian church outside the city centre where car parking is available and not charged and the church has easy access to key roads, because some of their members come from Glasgow, Falkirk and Kirkcaldy.

Please contact robbie.j.thomas@me.com"

18 hours per week (days & times negotiable)
Gross Salary (incremental) £7,984 per annum (£16,632 f.t.e.)
Includes a non-contributory pension.

We are seeking to appoint an Administrative Assistant to support the mission and ministry work in the Diocese of Edinburgh. You will work very closely with the Bishop's & Dean's PA and help to make sure both the Bishop and the Dean are able to use their time as efficiently as possible.

The Diocesan Office has a small and very friendly team of staff in a pleasant office very close to Haymarket. We are therefore very keen to get the right personality in the role to work within our team, as well as finding someone with the right skills. If you would like to discuss any aspects of the job before applying you are very welcome to ring Simon Filsell, Diocesan Administrator, on 0131 538 7033.

We are looking for someone with:

- A professional but pastoral approach to work
- Strong administrative and organisational abilities
- Ability to work independently and flexibly
- Good written verbal communication skills
- Computer skills – use of MS Office suite (or equivalent) to a basic level
- Prior experience in an administration role

All staff are fully supported and developed through our Annual Review process.

Deadline for applications: Noon on Friday 7 June 2019

Interviews will be held towards the end of June (date tbc)

Download the application pack from <https://edinburgh.anglican.org/vacancies-2/>

CAN WE USE YOUR SKILLS IN OUR COMMITTEES?

From time to time we have vacancies on our committees, and we would like to start a new initiative which is to maintain a list of those who have particular skills and experience in the areas we need and, when opportunities arise, to make contact and discuss how we might use them. Whilst the principal need is for committees, there are other occasions when we setup smaller short-term groups, to look at specific projects.

We are not necessarily looking for a long-term commitment, just an indication of interest at this stage. It may be that you have limited time available, but do have the skills/experience, and there are various ways we want to try and use those, without the need for attending regular meetings in Edinburgh. These are some of the areas in which we periodically need help:

FINANCE & MANAGEMENT

- Committee members – meeting 4 times a year, dealing with accounts, budgets etc.
- Wider financial reviews of both diocesan funds and the accounts of the congregations in the diocese
- Assist in supporting less-experienced Vestry Treasurers
- Financial policies

BUILDINGS

- Committee members – meeting at least 6 times a year, dealing with permissions for schemes of work and developments, grant applications and reviewing quinquennial reports
- Experience of church buildings, both maintenance and development/preservation
- Advice on residential properties (Rectories) and their management/upkeep
- Local site visits to look at individual schemes, from time to time, and produce a report for the committee to discuss

COMMUNICATIONS

- Advice on policies and practices
- Technical help for our Communications Coordinator

PERSONNEL

- Help with updating our policies (for office staff)
- Reviewing proposals for new posts

These areas are not exhaustive, and the central work of the diocese is always kept under review. If you think you have skills we might be able to use, not covered here, please do still get in touch.

In the first instance, send an email to Simon Filsell, Diocesan Administrator, at:

dioadmin@dioceseofedinburgh.org

He will then log the expressions of interest and pass them to those who are responsible for the appropriate area of work. Getting in touch does not commit you to any involvement. We would only hold your details for this specific purpose, and would only contact you twice a year to check that you were still happy for us to do this.

Thank you very much for considering this which, we hope, will enable us to provide an improved service across the entire diocese.

THE LIFE OF A GHANAIA SEAFARER -Becoming A Seafarer

Born and raised in a small community in the Eastern Region of Ghana. I grew up in a nuclear family of eight, my mum, dad and five siblings. In spite of the highly unbalanced ratio of their low income to the family size, my parents were able to put most of us through school, the only long term investment they ever made.

Before I landed a job at sea, I had been searching for a job for four years, a very common phenomenon in Ghana. Most graduates spend lots of years searching for a jobs after school, especially those who studied technical courses in the tertiary level. As a chemical engineer graduate with no job, I had to resort to doing menial jobs like selling groceries on the street, running errands for shop owners just to get money to support myself and my family since I was the “lucky” one among my siblings. In my 4th year of job hunt I got introduced to the maritime industry by a friend though I wasn’t so sure about it. Raised in the Eastern Region of Ghana which is about two hours drive from the nation’s capital, the nearest place to the sea, the maritime industry wasn’t so popular until recently. The fact is that most Ghanaians consider seafarers to be fishermen.

Prior to my research about this profession, I personally liked the idea of a job full of adventure and challenges, this fueled my appetite to learn more about this job. After some research and consultations, I had to raise enough money for the mandatory courses, this got me taking up extra jobs like private teaching classes for high school students and some landscaping jobs. After taking the mandatory courses, another job search commenced, this time focusing on the marine crewing agencies. Visiting a couple of marine crewing agencies convinced me that my dream of becoming a seafarer was a dead end. Most of these agencies wanted people with experience for employment even though the maritime university in my country is the only internationally recognized maritime university in the sub region there is not a single ship in the country to help trains students who graduates from the school after the only state owned shipping line, The black Star Line, which was sold in the late 90s. This makes it difficult for anyone to have any hands-on experience from school before joining a ship and some of these agencies also want as much as two months’ salary before taking ones certificates for further processing. During these period, I had to travel about 45km every day for about two months just see an agent only to be told to come the next day because there was no job for me on each day. Some agencies also issue fake documents for huge sums of money from innocent people under the pretense of helping them get a desired ship. Generally, the marine crewing agencies are a major hurdle because of the huge sums of money they demand from the crew before getting them jobs.

After about a year and a half of searching I finally got a company, the only company I know in Ghana now who train lot of young graduates on their various vessels trading around the world. You can imagine the excitement when I got this job. I started the sea job as a deck apprentice on a gas tanker. I was basically de-rusting and painting always. With my educational background as a chemical engineer and determination I was able to prove to my company that I could do more. I am currently a gas engineer cadet on one of my company’s gas tanker ships trading within the North Sea. A career at sea is just as challenging and adventurous as I had imagined it to be. Being the first black gas engineer in my company it hasn’t been particularly easy but with determination and the immense support from the most welcomed visitors onboard from the Sailors Society of Scotland in the form of sound counselling sessions and warm kindness, I’m doing pretty good. This job also comes with incentives as I have had the opportunity to travel to about twenty countries in just three years. I get to see and interact with people from different cultures and it has been fascinating and this has nullified the many misconceptions I had through the media. The best part is that amidst the travel and adventure, I get to utilize my acquired knowledge from school as a chemical engineer. It is my dream to specialize in cryogenic engineering and help my company train more gas engineers from my country. Although it never crossed my mind to be working at sea, I will always choose to work at sea now and even in my next life.

When faced with the reality of deteriorating health, caring responsibilities, death or bereavement, people need many things from the NHS and other formal services, and from their friends, families and communities.

Though health and social care services play an important role, they are only part of the picture. Education, workplace culture, family networks, the media, community support and access to information all play an important role in shaping people's lives.

Churches and faith communities have a presence in nearly every area of Scotland and can offer support to those of faith or none. This conference will focus on how faith communities take an active part in developing approaches to support members of their congregations in all aspects of end of life – planning, spiritual care, support for the dying and the bereaved. The conference will explore examples of existing work and provide practical approaches and resources which churches can use.

Speakers include Mark Hazelwood, Rev Canon Dr Marion Chatterley, Rebecca Patterson, Robert Peacock, Richard Meade, Allan Logan, David Borrowman

FUNDRAISING RESOURCES

A valuable website for seeking out sources of funding. This particular page is related to obtaining funding to make disability-related improvements, but has some useful websites and contact details for grant-making bodies, which can fund other types of projects.

The screenshot shows the 'Through the Roof' website. At the top, there is a navigation bar with the logo, contact information (01372 749955, info@throughtheroof.org), and buttons for DONATE, SHOP, and LOGIN. Below this is a search bar and social media icons. The main content area features a large image of a smiling woman and a young boy. The title 'Obtaining Funding to Make Disability-Related Improvements' is prominently displayed. The text discusses the challenges of finding funding for church building improvements and provides advice on how to approach local authorities. A small image of a church interior is also visible.

Obtaining Funding to Make Disability-Related Improvements

Locating funding sources to make changes to church buildings to facilitate disability access can be very difficult. Unfortunately, there is no statutory funding generally available and so churches need to look for other sources creatively. This document contains some contacts that may be able to help, but our recommendation is that churches look to local grant making trusts to provide assistance.

If your premises are used regularly by community organisations for non church-based activities then the local authority may consider assisting with funding. For example, if your building is used for mother and toddler groups, elderly people's day centre, local scout and guide activity or if you rent rooms for local community groups.

For small projects such as construction of a small ramp, a tip is to contact the local authority immediately after Christmas when there may be some unspent budget in local authority budgets which must be spent by 31 March. One example of a successful application is a church which was a short distance away from a residential home and had a problem in that residents from the home had to cross a busy road because there was no pavement between the residential home and the church. The local council created an 80 meter long pavement for residents.

You will need to promote the community aspect strongly. A good starting point of contact will be your local authority Access Officer.

DOES YOUR CHURCH NEED GOOD QUALITY OFFICE FURNITURE?

The Scottish Bible Society is just beginning a major renovation of its office space. As a result it has a quantity of desks and chairs available for collection, together with modern matching tables, rectangular and semi-circular, that can be used separately or combined to form a large board room table. A donation in exchange would be welcomed, but the Society will be pleased to know that its furniture has a future use in a Christian context.
